FROM THE NEWMAN
COUNCIL OF CHURCHES
Pastor Terry
Newman Church of God

Define Faithful..

When we think about being faithful what comes to your mind? Perhaps thoughts of being steadfast, dedicated, dependable, and worthy of trust are but a few. The faithful person is steadfast, unchanging, and thoroughly grounded in relation to all. This sort of faithfulness is used in both the Old Testament and the New Testament to describe God's relation to the world and to describe the quality of relationship that Christians are called upon to have with God and with one another.

A faithful person is one who will finish the race.

A faithful person is one who you can count on to keep their word. They will keep the promises that they make even if it costs them something to do it. I am sure that some of you who have been married for many years have had to make some personal sacrifices in order to remain a faithful spouse.

The world needs to see more faithful and trustworthy people. There are many that proclaim faithfulness; but what is proclaimed is not always what is true. Many times I have told our Church congregants to be careful and to walk with righteousness. Let me explain. How do we know if one is faithful -that is faithful to their word-to themselves-to their fellow man-to God? In our every day actions we tell the world what is really in our heart and mind.....that is as simple as I can say it.... For what is in our heart and in our mind will come forth for the world to see in our actions. If we have a loving and caring heart faithful to the Church, God, Family, and country, then all the world will see. On the other hand, if our heart and mind is not faithful, then it will be consumed with hatred, deceit, lies, and Satan.

.....for he guards the course of the just and protects the way of His faithful ones As we faithfully serve the Lord in every way, then we experience His faithful service as well... a faithful service that protects our ways." Prov 2:8

And. "But the Lord is faithful, and He will strengthen and protect you from the evil one." 2Thes 3:3

Satan is around us but thanks to God for his protection from the evildoers.

The faithful followers of the Lord are the ones who stay near to Him and invite Him into the very center of their beings... into their hearts, minds, and souls. And when the Lord is fully in your heart, mind and soul, then you are ensured that you will be taken care of and watched over...faithfully preserved by the One you are faithful to.

And in a world that seems wrought with danger and sin, it's a comfort and peace to know we have a faithful Guardian in the Lord...there to protect and preserve us when we are faithful to Him. And when we do serve Him in full faithfulness, we discover the fullness of the love He has for us....our faithful Lord who protects and preserves-all because He loves us.

You and I, and all we know, exist because of Him..we must remember...for in everything, God is in control. From His protection, preservation, and love, we exist. And with this we are to show our gratitude and reverence for the One who made our lives possible, not just in the present but eternally as well through the sacrifice of His Son Jesus.

As long as we comply with the Lord's wishes, then we need not fear because we are living a righteous life that He favors. But when we decide not to follow His instructions and expectations, then we should remember that we do so at a risk.. because the God of all things does not take kindly to being slighted or disrespected. When we decide to go it on our own without the Lord's Blessing, then we do so alone.

When we serve the Lord faithfully, we experience His love, grace, and mercy to the fullest...and this brings our lives to a place that is dominated by joy and happiness—contentment and peace. What an awesome life it is when we get to experience the full measure of His blessings.

Thank you
Pastor Terry

Shiloh Schools Hold 3rd Annual Health Fair

Missy Tingley, School Nurse and Athletic Director, coordinated the 3rd annual Health Fair held at the Newman Grade School on Saturday, April 27th. As the information becomes better known, the Health Fair continues to provide the Jarad Pollock donating blood at the Health Fair. photos by Dana Hales communities an opportunity to have health screenings for their well-being as well as providing a service to the athletes of the school for next school year. Physicals are required to participate in extra-curricular sports programs at both the high school and the junior high. By using the Health Fair services, young athletes complete their requirements for participation at no cost. 43 student athletes received physicals through the Fair.

Kim Flesch, Pre-K teacher; Megan Silver, Pre-K teacher; and Marsha Silver, Program Assistant for S.H.I.P.

Casey Long, Shiloh High School English teacher and assisted by Paris McMullen greeted the Fair attendees and directed those to the blood drive area or started the student athletes seeking physicals with the necessary paperwork.

Lesia Young, Shiloh School Nurse also helped with the athletic physicals. Casey's sister, Tiffany Paul, a Nurse Practitioner at Carle Clinic in Urbana and Patty Murdough also a Nurse Practitioner from Carle were in charge of and signing off on the athletic physicals.

In addition, a blood drive was conducted in conjunction with the Health Fair and 26 people were able to satisfactorily donate. This surpassed the expected goal by almost double of what they they expected.

Included in the Health Fair were representatives from the Douglas County Health Department and the Edgar County Health Department. They were there to answer questions from the public and services they can provide. Sarah Bush Dental Clinic was on hand to provide information and dental care information. Kim Flesch, Pre-K teacher; Megan Silver, Pre-K teacher; and Marsha Silver, Program Assistant for S.H.I.P. were on hand to provide information to parents of pre-school children on the S.H.I.P. and Title programs. Wade Hales, EMT Program Director for Parkland College and local EMT responder for the Newman Fire Department was available to do blood pressure, blood sugar count, and oxygen saturation determinations for the Fair attendees.

Missy was pleased with the results of the Health Fair. She indicated that there were 83 people in attendance this year. For the third year of the program, it has been a great success for the community and Shiloh Schools.

Linda & Cork's Ultimate Africa Trip

2nd part of the Goby's Trip to the Dark Continent cont. from last week

We didn't have much of a breakfast but we ate at the fire pit and ate on our laps. They had cereal, toast, muffins, yogurt and fruit. I had peanut butter toast. We went out with Robert and saw a lot of the same animals but we did scare up a male lion. We saw a lone wildebeest with a herd of kudu. We had our tea and cookies and drove awhile and then came back to camp and had brunch. We had good bacon, pasta, omelets, hard boiled eggs and other stuff. After brunch we watched a DVD of our optional tours in Victoria Falls so we could decide how much money we wanted to spend! Taitus talked to the 4 of us about what we might want him to talk about. We played dominoes for awhile and then went back to the tent and repacked again! We're going to leave ½ our luggage in Victoria Falls on our way to Hwange. We had afternoon tea with a very small hamburger with grilled onion and tomato and orange cake. Taitus talked about some controversial topics and then we left on a night drive. We saw 2 cheetahs by the airstrip and then drove around some more. We stopped by the river for our sundowner cocktails. A few of us saw a crocodile. We drove around and bounced around what seemed like forever. We were about back to camp when another jeep found a hippo walking right down the middle of the road. There was a leopard ahead of it walking down the road also. Our jeep followed it into the next camp and headed around a building waiting for it. Cork got a couple of good pictures when it walked right by us. We found out later that Sophie, our camp manager's wife, made one of the drivers take her to their camp in the jeep because the leopard was in the area. We came back and had supper and went to bed. We had spring rolls, steak, potatoes, broccoli, cheese crepes, vegetables and toffee apple tart.

This day was a relaxing day for everyone. Some of us went fishing and the rest did a cruise down the river. We played dominoes when we got back and then we repacked. We all went on a sunset cruise and had our sundowner on the boats. Before supper Sophie explained the courting and marriage customs of her tribe. Then she handed out the material that we had picked out at the market. The material had been cut into 2 pieces, one for the head dress and one for the skirt. She demonstrated how to tie the skirt and we all put on our new costumes. Boy did we look great with odd looking shirts on top and odd looking shoes on the bottom! The staff performed for us and had the American women dancing with them in our skirts and headdresses. Then we performed, which wasn't much better than the other times! We had our traditional dinner after all the dancing and then we went to bed.

The next day was our travel day to the next camp. We flew to Livingstone airport and went by bus to Victoria Falls where we flew to our last camp. We had to go from Zambia to Zimbabwe. We stopped and walked across the Victoria Falls Bridge and then stopped in town and booked our optional tours. We dropped our bags at the hotel. We got to our new camp and it's better yet. It even has a swimming pool. The first camp we had, our tents looked out to the river and down to a path that animals used. The second camp the tents looked out over a marshy area that animals used to get to water. The third camp the tents looked onto the river. The last camp looked over the plain or savannah. Everything is built on pilings. This tent was bigger yet with a small porch overlooking the plain. The bad thing was, Cork picked the wrong bag to leave in Victoria Falls! He had no clean clothes at all. I had another shirt, underwear and socks but we had no deodorant, shampoo, brush, dominoes, etc. Taitus said he would try to get our bag to us but he wasn't sure it was possible. We had good hor doerves and a good supper. We had steak, potatoes and crepe suzette!

This part of the country is a lot cooler than the rest we've visited. It was pretty cold in our tent. I didn't sleep real well because I was cold. Cork had washed out his underwear, socks and shirt the night before and they were still wet. He had to wear them wet! It's a good thing he had his fleece and jacket! We had a small breakfast out on the deck and then went on our game drive. This camp has smaller jeeps and they have 3 so the 4 of us had one to ourselves. This camp is the only one that the guides carry guns. They carry them in the jeeps and on their way to escort us to our tents.

We spent a lot of time watching lions feeding on a dead giraffe. There were 3 lionesses, 8 cubs and the male. We barely saw him, he walked into the brush before we knew he was there. We went back for brunch and then siesta time. Of course we don't have the dominoes so we caught up on our notes. We were sitting in the lounge talking and in came Taitus with our other bag! Cork wouldn't have to wear wet clothes anymore! We went on an evening drive and saw a huge herd of buffalo. We went back and watched the lions some more. We went back for supper which was chicken and rice. We stood out back and Taitus gave us a lesson on the stars.

We had a good breakfast before leaving for our day at the village. We saw a big herd of wildebeest and zebras but we haven't seen too many new animals. We went to the school first and met with the principal and left our gifts. The school gets money from the Grand Circle Foundation. After that we went to the store and bought groceries for the village family. We met the head man and his family. Some of us tried the local beer and we learned a lot about the life of the villagers. They had a shopping area out back of the headman's home with villagers wanting to sell their crafts. I bought a big fly net from the head man's wife and a few carved animals. We went back to the camp and the guys went to the bar and Marylou and I sat at the pool with our feet in the water. We had our talk with Taitus to let us know what was going on the next day. We had our traditional dance and song out by the big fire. Our performance was better this time. We had pork chops, leftover rump steak for supper and then sat and talked awhile. I sat in the bed writing in my journal and could hear hyenas not too far away.

Herd of zebras seen on one of their safari expedition.

We got up early again and had a good breakfast before we left camp. We took a short game drive on the way to the airstrip. We watched a big elephant in a water hole while we were having our coffee. He came our way and I thought he was going to come right to us. Our flight was fine and we were early so we stopped at a factory (if you want to call it that) and watched them work on carved animals. We got to the hotel and waited on our rooms. We ordered our supper before we went to our rooms. They give you a menu on a piece of paper, Taitus started to read it to us so we could pick what we wanted. I took over reading it and then we picked. It was not an easy process. We left the hotel at 3:00 for our tour of Victoria Falls. They are something else! We all got wet with the mist but we got some good pictures. We had supper at 7:00 and then we had Dick's birthday cake and champagne. We had wart hog and impala for supper. Taitus gave all the Inner Circle members the Tonga walking staff as gifts. The others got small necklaces. We got our Africa T-shirts and we're going to wear them home. We went back to the room early since we have to be up and out at 5:40 a.m.

We both woke up at 4:30 and were in the lobby before 5:30. Taitus met us in the yard to make sure we got out alright. Manuel picked us up on time and we left in an open jeep. It was a good thing he had lots of blankets because it was cold! We went to a private game reserve to look for the black rhino. We were having our coffee at the dam when the other guide radioed the rhinos were where they were used to being fed. When we got there, there was another jeep there already that had Dick and Marylou in it. We got our pictures and then went for the elephant ride. We rode for about ½ hour and then went back and took pictures and had breakfast. We had tomatoes, baked beans, eggs, sausage, bacon, toast and juice. Dick and Marylou were eating when we got there. They got back to the hotel before we did. We all ordered our lunch and then went shopping. We walked all the way. We didn't really see too much we wanted. We went back and had lunch and then I went to the pool. Cork and Marylou packed and Dick laid on the bed. We left the hotel at 3:40 for our walk with the lions. They had two 18 month old cubs that we sat by and petted and then we took a walk with the lions. A little later they laid down and we took more pictures. We went back to the hotel and messed around until time for supper. Cork was ticked off because the service was so terrible and he wasn't pleasant. We had wart hog for supper again. We had to ask for butter, a soup spoon, there wasn't any pepper and no napkins. We went back to the room and read awhile.

We had a late buffet breakfast and took care of our bills and messed around until 9:30. We set our bags outside our doors and went to listen to a Scottish guide that lives in Victoria Falls talk about David Livingstone. It was very interesting. We left the hotel around 10:30 and went to the Victoria Falls Airport for our flight to Johannesburg. We waited about 1 ½ hours for our flight. When we got to Johannesburg there was no OAT representative there and we didn't see any signs for baggage claim so we kept walking to International transfers. We ended up at a counter right outside security where we got our boarding passes. Supposedly the lady routed our bags to Dulles. Wrong! The other 4 on the flight went back and went to baggage claim and got their boarding passes and they got their bags, we didn't. The flight wasn't too bad, my butt got tired but I slept quite a bit. The food was the pits but it wasn't too bad otherwise. They ran out of choices on your meals by the time they got to us. When we got to Chicago we went to baggage claim service and got things squared away. Our bags should be coming to us by FedEx. Since it's the weekend we probably won't get the bags until Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday.

None of us were ready to come home from this trip, which is unusual. It was SO different from any trip we've ever taken. The staff at every camp was so friendly and willing to help. We felt like we left friends behind. It was rare to get any sign of affection from them, especially the men, because their culture doesn't show affection like we do. There were some in the camps that did. Auntie in the second camp was a sweetie, we squeezed hands and I gave her a kiss on the cheek. Sophie in the 3rd camp told us she liked hugs and she got plenty. Elizabeth in the last camp was another sweetie and liked the hugs. The men were friendly and they would kid with you but they don't hug! Our trip leader was great! He was friendly and funny and had everything going smoothly. He made sure we had a lot of learning and discovery about Africa. We learned so much that we couldn't retain much of it. Every day we either had a talk from a guide at the lodge or on the game drives. All the guides were very knowledgeable and really worked hard to find the animals for us to enjoy. They said we were lucky we saw animals and birds that most people don't get to see. Thankfully Cork had his new camera with a good zoom so he could get good pictures of some of those animals.

All of the tents and areas of the camps were very clean and neat. We had daily turn down of our beds and we had free laundry service. They do the laundry by hand and sun dry the clothes. They will iron them unless you tell them not to do it. The food was good and nicely served and the tables were always presented nicely. We almost always had cloth napkins, even in the bush! Our eating experiences on the game drives were so different than what I expected. We had tables, chairs, tablecloths, real plates and silverware and sometimes glassware! They wanted to make sure we didn't go hungry! I'm surprised I didn't gain weight!

We didn't buy as many souvenirs as we usually do but our pictures and our memories will take care of that. I just hope everybody doesn't get tired of us talking about this trip.

We stopped for groceries on the way and visited with Mom a little bit and then came on home. We unpacked what we had and I did some laundry. I went to bed really early.

Fresh Air for Brain Health by Mark Underwood

Gardening has long been known as a great way to get outdoors and enjoy fresh air and sunshine. And gardening has hidden benefits that can boost your overall health including better brain health.

You don't need a big plot of land to enjoy gardening. Use containers on a porch or patio to grow a wide variety of fruits or vegetables. A five-gallon bucket with holes for drainage can be used to grow a great crop of tomatoes. Even if you aren't actively involved in gardening, just walking in a garden can give you a sensory experience that promotes relaxation and reduces stress.

Here are several ways gardening boosts your health and well-being.

Low Impact Exercise
Gardeners love to get outdoors and work with their hands. Because of that, gardening keeps you exercising even when a gym may not work for you. Gardening is certainly not the same as pumping iron or running a marathon. But when you are digging, planting, and doing other tasks you have opportunities for low impact exercise. Gardeners who do more physical work like hauling wheelbarrows of rocks or dirt get quite a workout. No matter what level of exercise you do, gardening will help keep you limber.

Stress Reduction
When you walk among beautiful flowers and watch vegetables spring up, it's easy to see why gardening enriches the mind. But have you thought about gardening as a tonic for reducing stress? If not, you should. A recent study in the Netherlands suggests that gardening can fight stress even better than other relaxing leisure activities. Participants in the study either read indoors or gardened for 30 minutes. Afterward, the group that gardened reported being in a better mood than the reading group, and they also had lower levels of the stress hormone cortisol. Most of us push ourselves to the max, but gardening really does make you slow down and literally smell the roses.

Tracking Your Accomplishments
Gardeners love to keep records. It would be difficult to remember from year to year what plants did well and those that didn't thrive in specific locations, under what conditions, and especially if you have a large vegetable, fruit and flower garden. That's why gardeners love to keep photos of what they planted, before and after shots, and notes about their garden's progress. Since it would be difficult to remember every detail of last year's garden when you get ready to plant again this year, a photo journal along with written records can make you a more effective and efficient gardener. Those journals are handy reviews of what to plant again and what to forego. Notes written by hand or typed on your computer will also give you another benefit. When you keep track of your gardening accomplishments, you're apt to better remember the details.

And what's more, you'll be boosting your brain health by sharpening your memory and recall skills.

Mood Booster
Gardening has proven to be a good way to change your mood for the better. A Norwegian study followed participants with mood disorders who spent six hours a week growing flowers and vegetables. After three months, half of the participants had experienced a measurable improvement in their depression symptoms. Even after they stopped gardening, their good moods continued three months after the gardening experiment was over.

Eat Fresh
Growing your own food has the obvious benefit of being able to enjoy fresh fruits and vegetables. Several studies have shown that people who garden eat more fresh fruits and vegetables than people who don't have home gardens. Growing your own garden also gives you the convenience of trying new things. You may not buy arugula at the grocery store but now that you're having success with it at home, it stretches your thinking—what else could you plant that you've never thought about before?

Make Room for Executive Function
Gardening, like many activities, can be good for you once you get going, but sometimes we all need extra motivation to accomplish our goals. Don't blame your willpower for not getting outside and gardening. Instead, research has found that if you have poor executive decision, you may not stick to goals compared to people with excellent executive functions. Executive function includes such things as planning and being able to thoroughly consider options in front of you, it also includes having a prospective memory. That is defined as having a sharp recall ability to remember to do things or say 'no' to other things like becoming sedentary instead of getting exercise. The message is clear. When you take care of your brain health you will have better willpower. Cognitive performance, memory and willpower go hand-in-hand. The great outdoors is yours to enjoy and with the added support of great nutrition and executive function, you're on your way to better brain health.

Weatherman Comes to Newman Grade School

by Dana Hales

week before, but due to the unseasonable amount of rain that fell that week, Mr Fabert was precluded from coming to Newman.

Derick talked about the water cycle – rain, run-off to rivers, evaporation, forming clouds and then rain again. He took questions that were asked by the students and sent to him prior to his visit. Some included How do storms start? What makes tornadoes? How long can a tornado twirl? Can thunder break glass? What is lightning? How do you know what the weather will be like on a certain day? Do you use a computer to find out what the weather is like? How do you study weather? What is the hottest temperature it has been here in Illinois? What has been the highest wind? Can it blow down a building? How do you measure wind? Is wind important? What weather conditions make the difference for hail, sleet, or snow? How did you get your job? Why did you want to become a meteorologist? What kinds of things did you study in school to do your job? What does the camera looklike? Are the people on the weather channel real? What is it like to be on camera?

The students really enjoyed the presentations and hopefully they went back to their classrooms with a better understanding of the weather and how it affects us during our daily lives.

Derick Fabert holds the children's attention as speaks about rain, tornadoes, and wind. They enjoyed his presentation. They learned lots of information about rain, wind, storms and what to do if the weather information comes across the television. Questions were also asked about the education Mr. Fabert received to become a weatherman.

Junior Beta Hosts Senior Citizen Luncheon

Wednesday, April 24th the Shiloh Junior Beta program hosted their annual Senior Citizen's Luncheon at the Multi-purpose room at Hume. Approximately 30 seniors attended the meal which included bar-b-que pork slices, scalloped cheesy potatoes, green beans and dessert. They were entertained by the Junior High Music department with solos and ensembles from the recent music contest participation. Mr. Terry Sullivan is the sponsor for the Jr. Beta program.

Registration open for Young Writers Workshop

CARBONDALE, Ill. — Would-be writers can register now for the annual Southern Illinois University Carbondale Young Writers Workshop in June. Now in its 15th year, the Young Writers Workshop is an intensive program open to high school students who will be sophomores, juniors or seniors in the 2013-14 academic year. Participants work closely with SIU Carbondale creative writing faculty and graduate students in writing workshops, panel discussions, and readings. The workshop runs June 25-29. It is a residential program, and the $320 registration fee includes meals, housing, materials and instruction. Applicants should submit writing samples — three poems, or three to five pages of prose as either a story or an essay. Students automatically apply for a Young Writers Workshop scholarship through submission of the writing samples. Scholarships for reduced tuition are merit-based. Allison Joseph, director and founder of the SIU Carbondale Young Writers Workshop, is also director of the master of fine arts in creative program at the

Charleston Speedway Results by Laura Smyser

Opening night was this past Saturday. It was breezy and chilly. That didn't stop fifty eight drivers from participating. Other tracks had canceled early on Saturday. So they ventured in from different towns. Promoter Darrell Hellman was determined that Mother Nature wasn't going to win. Hellman had been out at the track since Thursday, pumping the water off. All his work paid off, the show went on as planned. Danny Schwartz was the sixth modified driver out of the chute. Out of thirty cars, he set the fast time 14.97. Matt Meyer hit the wall during his heat and rolled his car on the back stretch but was ok. The top six out of heats transferred to the feature and the top two out of the semi. The top six in the feature drew for their starting positions. Danny Schwartz was to start in the tenth spot but had some problems so he had to start on the tail. By lap eight Schwartz had moved into the top ten. Caution came out with two laps to go with eight cars left in the race. During the caution Allen lost a rear spring. They made the decision to let him continue. Allen went on to capture the feature. In the Street Class, Benji Rine posted quick time 16.18 out of fifteen cars. Rine and Daryl Hellman were heat winners. Rine took the early lead and Hellman tucked in behind him. Rine, Hellman, and Tyler Blankenship put on a good show racing hard with one another. Also Matt Dillon (Newman, IL) and Zac Brandenburg were having a racing duel. Rine went on to win the feature.. Factory Stock Class Randy Smyser and Danny White were the heat winners. Smyser took the lead, White, Justin Evans, John Strawser were involved in a pile up in turn one on the first lap. Smyser continued with the lead with five laps to go. On the final lap, Smyser hit a rut and that sent him up high. Parsons was able to get past Smyser. Smyser was able to get up beside Parsons out of four to the checkered flag. Parsons was able to hold on to win the feature event. Two Rookies David Gentry finished third and Jacob Pinkerton Finished fourth. This coming Saturday STREET STOCK SHOOTOUT INCREASED PAYOUT FOR STREET STOCK CLASS.
